This dissertation would have never been possible without the support of many people.

I want to first and foremost thank my interview partners in Sierra Leone and the Philippines. They invested time and shared their experiences and views with me. I want to thank them for their openness and trust. My field research would have never been possible without the help of my research assistants, who organized travels, translated for me and opened me a door to their society. Thank you Moses Kamara, Bintu Kanneh, Sarina Magdales and Angel Panizales for your amazing support and company on this journey.

Many thanks to my supervisor Prof. Andreas Hasenclever, who always seemed to believe in me (even when I was not). Thank you to Hendrik Quest, who supported me with great comments and advice on my work and always had my back. Special thanks have to go to Dr. Jan Sändig. It was the greatest pleasure to collaborate with him. I greatly profited from his experience and his input. I am also grateful for many other colleagues from the Institute of Political Science and the IR Phd Colloquium. They supported this work with helpful ideas and inspiring discussions.

I would like to thank my colleagues from the Sonderforschungsbereich 923 “Bedrohte Ordnungen”. Their different disciplinary background opened up my limited political science view. I am especially grateful for Prof. Jochen von Bernstorff and Markus Hasl who inspired me to take up a legal view. Working together in the research project “Local orders under threat from land grabbing – Global civil society and international law as curse or blessing?” was a great pleasure and greatly influenced this research. I am grateful for many other colleagues at the SFB 923, especially the lunch group. You helped me keep my mental sanity!

For the financial support that made this study and its publication possible, I want to thank the DFG (Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft).

Finally, I want to thank my many friends and my family who supported me during this dissertation. It was not always an easy ride and it was a good feeling to know that you had my back. Thank you for the comforting words, coffee breaks, walks across the Österberg, phone calls and Saturday evening dinners. I feel like you carried me over the finish line.
