Appendix VI: Hyperlink to iCourts Working Papers Series

iCourts Working Papers Series (WPS) is the showcase of research output during the years. The series also include papers from researchers affiliated with the center; visiting professors, guest researchers and close collaboration partners. The WPS is an opportunity to get access to what is in the pipeline as regards future publications. Many of the papers are co-authored articles. <https://jura.ku.dk/icourts/research-resources/working-papers/>

Appendix VII: Principal Investigator Projects at iCourts

Since iCourts is designed on a Principal Investigator (PI) model - consisting of one PI and one collective research plan conducted by a staff group - itself have generated and attracted new PI-projects, and since the whole spirit in the introduction was not only to look backwards, it seems natural to point out the major current PI-projects of the center. Without doubts we will here find some of the contributors to sharpening the future of the center.

As a group, the PI-projects have already made one important widening of the center identity: While some of the projects is basic research oriented in terms of being targeted towards empirical studies, field trips and clarification at conceptual and terminological level, others are occupied by counseling private or public partners, and make the knowledge of the projects more applied in a given context. Or rather the specific balance between the basic and applied components in each particular project differs from project to project.

The scope and the scale have expanded and the possible mutual inspiration between the PI-projects: iCourts from being a PI-project to an overall framework or platform for a multitude of PI-projects, seems to be one of the obvious challenges and changes of the next few years. One of the natural avenues would be that some of the successful PI-projects established and mature themselves as new, independent research centers.

Aside from the collective PI-projects iCourts also house a number of individually, external funded projects dealing with for example different International Courts, EU studies, and Chinese Legal Studies: The important growth layer and next generation of researchers of the center.

The following list is not exhaustive. Many of the PI's have additional external funded projects.

PI-projects at iCourts

Project title: "Human Rights Nudge. Redesigning the Architecture of Human Rights Remedies". <https://jura.ku.dk/icourts/research/humanrightsnu dge/>

PI: Associate professor Veronika Fikfak.

Funding: ERC.

Research plan: The research project examines how states respond to and implement decisions taken by the European Court of Human Rights. Although international institutions have long been concerned with human rights, national governments' respect for them has been overwhelmingly weak. Motivated by this distinction, the researchers want to take a closer look at why and how states interfere in the lives of individuals and then how and when this behavior potentially can be changed to foster greater respect for human rights norms. Based on previous cases of human rights violations, researchers look at how different specific remedies affect national governments' compliance and internalization of human rights. With insights from both behavioral economics, psychology and the social sciences, researchers want to find new solutions that governments, communities and even individuals can apply. The main purpose of the research project is to determine how human rights violations can be counteracted and minimized in the future.

Project title: "European Constitutional Imaginaries: Utopias, Ideologies and the Other" (Imagine). <https://jura.ku.dk/icourts/research/Imagine/>

PI: Professor Jan Komárek.

Funding: ERC.

Research plan: Imagine examines the constitutional ideas behind the European integration project at both national and EU levels. First and foremost, researchers focus on how ideas created by constitutional thinkers at the EU level are communicated and established across borders and governments. Next, they take a closer look at how nationally rooted ideas about states, including state sovereignty, and constitutionalism have interacted with the demands of the integration project and how this has changed over time. The project focuses in particular on the discursive implications of "European constitutionalism", including how ideas can motivate and justify governance and collective self-government. The main purpose of the research project is to integrate different perspectives to get a bigger picture of how constitutional legislation views Europe.

Project title: “The Global Sites of International Criminal Justice” (JustSites). <https://jura.ku.dk/icourts/research/justsites/>

PI: Professor with special responsibilities Mikkel J. Christensen.

Funding: ERC.

Research plan: JustSites examines how so-called ‘sites’ help structure international criminal justice and the fight against international crimes. Justice sites are to be understood as a variety of localities under which the political, legal and professional activities that collectively create international criminal justice have been developed. These include NGO offices in conflict zones, foreign ministries, research centers, etc., all of which help to define and structure international criminal justice and developments in that field of research. The project then moves beyond the conventional focus on courts and focuses instead on the balances within authority and power in the various justice sites.

Project title: “International Law & Military Operations” (InterMil). <https://jura.ku.dk/icourts/research/intermil/>

PI: Professor with special responsibilities Astrid Kjeldgaard-Pedersen.

Funding: The Danish Defense Budget.

Research plan: In collaboration with the Center for Military Studies and the Defense Academy in Denmark, InterMil engages in research-based consultation in the public sector within military studies. The collaboration is motivated by a desire to create a greater focus on challenges with international law within international operations, cyber, drones, high tech and electronic warfare, which is summarized in four main themes. The first theme, International law and cyber operations below the threshold of warfare, focuses on cybercrime and how this poses an increasing threat to particularly technologically advanced small states such as Denmark. The second theme, State responsibility in partnered operations, looks at the division of state responsibility in international cooperation both between states and non-state actors. The third theme, New military technology, deals with the challenges that arise as a result of the development of new, advanced military technology. The fourth and final theme, Military operations at sea, focuses on the opportunities and challenges that arise in the various military operations at sea, including the interplay between the law of the sea, international human rights and international humanitarian law.

Project title: “Study Hub for International Economic Law and Development” (SHIELD). <https://jura.ku.dk/english/shield/>

PI: Professor with special responsibilities Joanna Lam.

Funding: Faculty of Law.

Research plan: The Study Hub for International Economic Law and Development (SHIELD) deals with international economic law, conflict resolution and policy-making, including in particular international trade, investment and commercial law. The project focuses on both economic and non-economic interests and values, in addition to the institutional consequences of the interaction between them. A particular area of focus is global economic governance and transformations of the regulatory mechanisms in this field. As an academic platform, SHIELD wants to connect different interests and create a dialogue between both national and international actors.

Project title: “Judging Under the Influence: A critical review of the influence of legal actors on the jurisprudence of the Court of Justice of the European Union”. <https://jura.ku.dk/icourts/research/judging-under-the-influence/>

PI: Associate professor Urska Sadl.

Funding: Sapere Aude, Independent Research Fund Denmark.

Research plan: The research project examines, with a critical examination, the influence of legal actors on the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Union. In any courtroom, law, politics and personality matter. The key question the research project seeks to answer is how much and when do they matter in Luxembourg? The overall aim is to show how the parties, the governments of the Member States, the European institutions and national judges shape the method of interpretation chosen by the Court, the precedents it cites, the arguments it develops and the result it achieves.

Project title: Danish Language Processing for Legal Texts (LEGALESE).
<https://jura.ku.dk/icourts/research/legalese-danish-language-processing-for-legal-texts/>

PI: Professor Henrik Palmer Olsen.

Funding: GrandSolutions, Innovation Fund Denmark.

Research plan: The University of Copenhagen's Faculty of Law and the Department of Computer Science have entered into a collaboration with Schultz and the National Board of Appeal. The research project seeks to investigate and develop a technological product for language processing and impartial techniques to provide semi-automated auxiliary tools for both the public and private sectors. The purpose is to investigate and optimize case processing using Natural Language Processing (NLP) to obtain legal information. By developing NLP, which is specifically tuned to the Danish legal language, LEGALESE will develop models that form the basis for innovative functions in new software to make legal information gathering more efficient and secure. The project is based on state-of-the-art NLP (BERT) and uses a multilingual approach to model generation, trained and coded in general Danish legal texts, as well as on more specialized texts made available by the IT company Schultz and the National Board of Appeal.

Project title: "DATA4ALL: Data Science for Asylum Legal Landscaping".
https://jura.ku.dk/english/staff/research/?pure=en%2Factivities%2Fdata-for-asylum-legal-landscaping-data4all\(cfca7bfe-bd42-4c64-801c-f50986db5051\).html.html)

PI: Professor with special responsibilities Thomas Gammeltoft-Hansen

Funding: DATA+ pool, University of Copenhagen.

Research plan: By utilizing large decision-making data in the Nordic region, DATA4ALL is pioneering a new research agenda that combines computer science and migration law to understand the significant variations in the results of asylum decisions in and across countries. Despite decades of legal harmonization, the chances of receiving asylum for people from the same country still vary considerably across Europe. DATA4ALL seeks to compare large decision data from the Nordic countries and use NLP (Natural Language Processing), sentiment analysis, machine learning and process mining to illuminate and provide a unique understanding of the phenomenon. The project draws further on critical data studies to engage decision-makers themselves, raise questions about the data and promote data literacy and ethics among both scholars and practitioners.
